

10 Warning signs of domestic violence

Is someone you know in a relationship with someone who...

1. Puts them down?
2. Loses their temper, strikes or breaks objects?
3. Is extremely jealous?
4. Controls their finances, behavior, appearance, and social life?
5. Hurts animals or children?

Does your client...

6. Get quiet when their partner is around or seem afraid to anger them?
7. Rarely see friends and family or cancel plans at the last minute?
8. Casually mention their partner's violent behavior but dismiss what happened as "not a big deal"?
9. Have unexplained injuries?
10. Have children who are frequently upset, quiet, or withdrawn?

If you think your client is in an abusive relationship, but you aren't sure - GO WITH YOUR INSTINCTS. You probably wouldn't be concerned without reason.

What if you see an assault in progress?

Be sure to keep yourself safe - don't intervene, but do something about it. Don't assume someone else has already taken care of it.

Write down all the information you can remember, including any license plate numbers and the location of the assault.

Listen.

Let your client know you care.

Listen without judging.

Your friend may feel responsible, ashamed, inadequate, or afraid.

It is NOT your client's fault.

Make sure your client knows they are not alone.

Explain that domestic violence is a crime.

Help is available from the police, the courts, and domestic violence programs.

Encourage your client to call.

The YWCA can help establish a safety plan or obtain a protection order.

If you need advice on how to help a client in an abusive relationship, our 24-hour Crisis Line is free and confidential.

What if your client decides to Stay?

Recognize that leaving is difficult.

Victims stay with their abusers for many reasons, such as fearing for their life, wanting their children to grow up with both parents, or feeling to blame for the abuse. Sometimes victims just want the violence to end, not the relationship.

Encourage your client to keep records in a safe place.

A log of abuse should include evidence of threats in letters, emails, voicemails, or texts.

Help identify resources.

Make a list of providers like the YWCA that can help increase safety and self-sufficiency.

Suggest telling a doctor.

A doctor or nurse can document the abuse in medical records and take photographs of injuries, which will be helpful if your friend decides to take legal action.

What if your client decides to Leave?

Suggest developing a safety plan.

A safety plan is helpful in case of emergency. Your friend can keep money, important documents, a change of clothes, and an extra set of keys in a safe place, such as with a friend or neighbor.

Decide how you can help.

Your friend may need money, assistance finding a place to live, a place to store belongings, or help finding a safe home for pets.

Contact the YWCA or a domestic violence program for assistance.
